

NEWS RELEASE

CruisePortInsider.com
PO Box 50631
Pasadena, CA 91115

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

December 21, 2011

CRUISEPORTINSIDER.COM™ COMES TO THE RESCUE OF CURIOUS CRUISERS

*The Internet's Most Comprehensive Guide to Popular Cruise Ports
Provides Complete 2012 Cruise Ship Arrival and Departure Schedules
Covering Each of the Site's 39 Ports*

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA – Are you looking for the best time to take a cruise vacation to a particular destination—when the number of your fellow cruisers will be low? Or do you just want to see how many other cruise ships will also be visiting a port when you're there? And perhaps you're wondering just how much time you'll have on shore to explore the ports that you'll be visiting.

The good news is that CruisePortInsider.com, the Web's most comprehensive guide to popular cruise ports, has published the full 2012 cruise port schedules for 39 of the most popular cruise port destinations. These destinations include ports on Alaskan, Bahamian, Caribbean, Mexican Riviera, Pacific Coastal and Panama Canal cruises.

“CruisePortInsider.com is the only free site on the internet where you can find such a trove of helpful data on the comings and goings of cruise ships in each port,” said Bob Haefliger, publisher of CruisePortInsider.com. “Over the past several years, the visitors to our site have found this information to be of great value and interest. Providing this free schedule information is just a part of our effort to help our readers plan a great day in port.”

The new schedules for 2012 mark the third year for which the information has been available on CruisePortInsider.com. Many visitors to the site have used the schedule information to plan a cruise holiday aboard a specific ship, while others have used the data to plan their shore excursions and other activities. For ports with more than one cruise ship terminal, such as Cozumel, Roatan or Key West, the schedule identifies the specific pier being used by each ship.

